

Photo: Astrid Sehl

For people working with refugees who must return, or those who consider repatriating

One of INCOR's goals is to raise the level of knowledge about return and repatriation among refugee workers in Norway. To achieve this goal, INCOR offers a seminar programme on related issues for reception centres employees.

People working in local government, non-governmental organisations or other sectors through which they have contact with refugees that must return or those considering repatriation can contact INCOR for information or advice. INCOR is also happy to visit municipalities, organisations and associations to provide useful information on the global refugee situation.

For more information about INCOR:

www.nrc.no/incor

Who can I contact?

INCOR's advisers are bound by a duty of confidentiality, and you have the right to remain anonymous if you wish.

Free phone line (from house phone):

800 41 855 or 800 41 042

We speak the following languages:

Norwegian, English, Farsi, Dari, Pashto, Kurdish (sorani), Arabic, Russian and Bulgarian. For other languages we can provide an interpreter.

You can also phone the switchboard on:

23 10 98 00 and ask to talk to INCOR.

Fax number:

23 10 98 01

E-mail:

incor@nrc.no

Post address:

INCOR, Norwegian Refugee Council
Postbox 6758, St. Olavs plass
0130 Oslo

Visiting address:

Grensen 17, Oslo

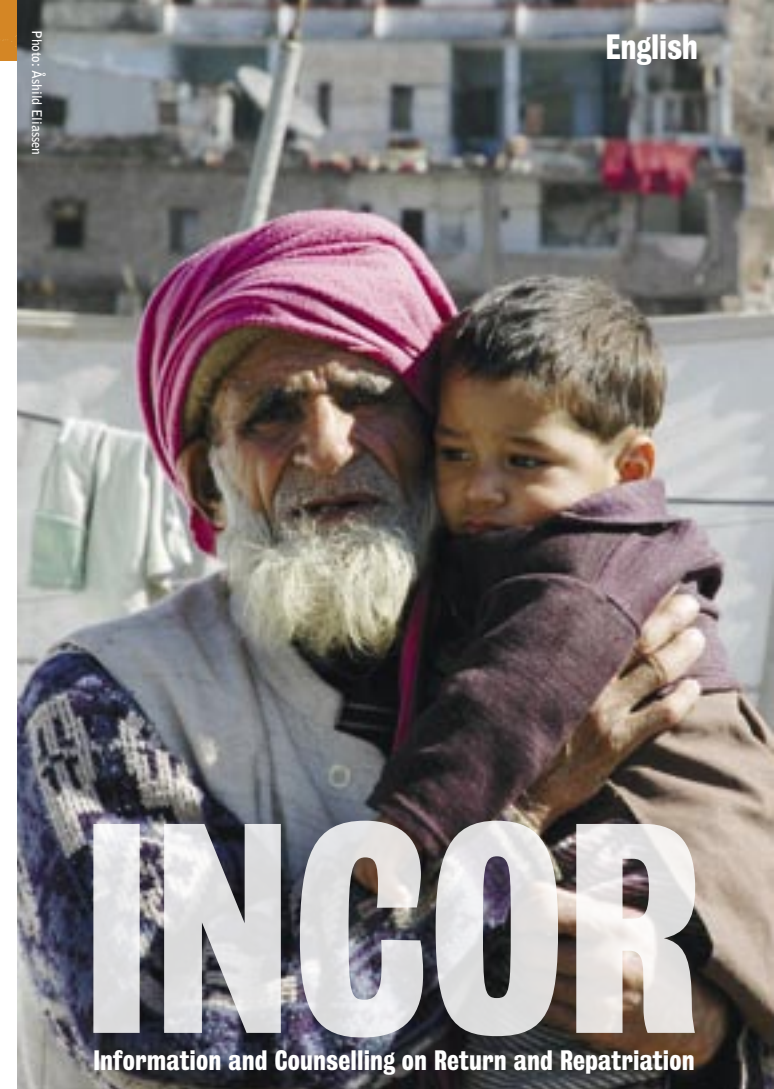

Photo: Ashild Eilissen

Design: cox.no

Information and Counselling on Return and Repatriation

For more information about INCOR: www.nrc.no/incor

The Norwegian Refugee Council is a non-governmental, humanitarian organisation that offers assistance and protection to refugees and internally displaced persons regardless of race, religion, nationality and political views. We have in-depth global experience from return and reintegration issues.

The INCOR-project of the Norwegian Refugee Council provides information and counselling for:

- persons with residence permits in Norway
- asylum seekers
- finally rejected asylum seekers
- unaccompanied minors (refugees and asylum seekers)
- refugee workers and reception centre employees

The INCOR-project, established in 1995, has extensive knowledge about the most important issues facing people who either must return, or consider repatriating to their home countries from Norway.

Photo: Astrid Sehl

We can help to obtain information about relevant issues, such as rights and duties, the asylum procedure, the prevailing political situation and return and repatriation programmes. We can also offer advice about issues to think through to take a well founded decision.

We can answer your questions about:

- What kind of rights do you have, upon return to your home country.
- Whom you may contact regarding matters of return, both in Norway and in the receiving country
- What schemes or support does the Norwegian Government offer with regards return and repatriation.
- What the most important issues are when considering repatriation.
- How to prepare children for repatriation.
- What other refugees have experienced when they have returned or repatriated to their home countries.

Contact INCOR!

INCOR has visited many refugees that have returned or repatriated to their home country. Their experiences provide us with valuable knowledge, which we are happy to share with you!

Photo: Roald Høvring

Photo: Hans Kristian Knævelsrud