

NRC's operations in Mali

Humanitarian overview

In 2012, when armed groups took control of Mali's northern regions, more than half a million Malians were displaced. Roughly 150,000 people fled to neighbouring countries, and hundreds of thousands became displaced inside Mali. In June 2015, a peace agreement was signed between the two major armed coalitions and the government. Since then, authorities have gradually returned to the north, providing basic services in the largest towns. But many remote areas still lack basic services, like healthcare and education. On top of this, conflicts have increased exponentially in the central regions.

In June 2015, a peace agreement was signed between the two major armed coalitions and the government. Since then, authorities have gradually returned to the north, providing basic services in the largest towns. Many remote areas still lack basic services, like healthcare and education. On top of this, conflicts have increased exponentially in the central and southern regions.

Since the eruption of the conflict those who remained have faced violence, poverty and food insecurity, and the number of internally displaced people continues to increase. Over 420,000 people fled their homes in northern and central Mali in 2022 due to intercommunal clashes, a rise in armed groups and military operations. In addition, there are 61534 refugees as per December 2022. Humanitarian needs are staggering. The UN estimates that over 8.8 million people will need assistance in 2023.

NRC's operation

We strive to provide lifesaving short-term and long-term aid to displaced people in Mali, as well as the most vulnerable among those who remain.

We advocate for the international community to increase engagement in Mali, focusing not only on security, but also on humanitarian access and the needs of those affected by displacement.

Rapid response mechanism (RRM)

Through RRM, NRC addresses the urgent needs of populations affected by sudden shocks, such as displacement due to violence. Following a multisector rapid assessment to identify needs, NRC distributes immediate relief assistance before regular humanitarian programming takes on the next steps.

Education

In 2022, an estimated 1,766 schools were closed and about 5290,000 children were deprived of their education in Mali. We work together with local communities, parents and education authorities to provide quality education to children and youth affected by displacement and conflict. Our education teams:

- provide catch-up classes for out-of-school children, giving them an opportunity to jump back into the formal education system
- support community-based learning in areas where no schools are functional
- provide vocational training for vulnerable youth, so that they can earn a living
- support the formal education system through teacher training, distribution of school materials and improving the governance of education at local level.

Information, counselling and legal assistance (ICLA)

We provide legal assistance to conflict-affected people through our services in central and northern Mali. By using mobile teams, we also extend our assistance beyond these areas. Specifically, we:

- help people to acquire civil documentation, such as identity cards and birth certificates, so that adults can access basic services, children can be enrolled in schools and have legal identity
- give training to local authorities on the needs and rights of internally displaced people as we provide them with registers and basic office supplies to enable them to issue civil documentations
- help internally displaced people and returnees to access their land and property rights by assisting those who have lost their documentation or whose claims to land are contested

Livelihoods and food security

In the regions most affected by displacement and compromised food security, our teams:

- provide vulnerable households with multipurpose cash assistance to enable them to meet food and other basic needs
- build stores in vulnerable communities and supply them with grain
- help people earn a living and rebuild their future through income-generating opportunities like community gardens, village savings and loan associations

Shelter and settlements

Our shelter teams:

- provide emergency assistance to people affected by displacement by distributing essential household items like blankets, mosquito nets, kitchen sets, clothes, and soap.
- provide housing to internally displaced people and vulnerable people from host communities
- with an integrated programming approach, construct and rehabilitate schools, classrooms, and latrines in areas where we have education activities to make sure that children have a friendly and safe learning environment.

Water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH)

Our WASH teams:

- design, build and manage water and sanitation infrastructures within communities and at schools

- inform students and communities on adequate hygiene practices
- construct and rehabilitate small-scale water systems supporting agriculture and livestock activities

Protection from violence

Conflicts between communities have contributed to the humanitarian crisis in Mali. These conflicts generally stem from small disputes related to land ownership and the sharing of natural resources that have become scarce due to climatic effects and conflicts limiting the movement of populations in remote areas. Our teams:

- prevent and resolve conflicts between communities through a neutral restoration of communication between the parties to a conflict
- hold regular training sessions for local actors involved in conflict resolution
- ensure regular monitoring of the implementation of action plans drawn up by the parties to a conflict following mediation

We conduct rapid protection assessments and respond to specific protection needs of the most vulnerable people as we support community and community-based organisations. We implement plans for the reduction of protection risks and enable a community protective environment. All these activities, among others, are carried out in order to strengthen the protection of civilians in Mali.
