

NRC's operations in Moldova

Humanitarian overview

Since February 2022, more than 1.2 million people have fled from Ukraine to the Republic of Moldova. Three years later, approximately 127,000 displaced people from Ukraine remain in Moldova.

Since the escalation of the war in Ukraine, the people and government of Moldova have continued to provide support to displaced people from Ukraine (including Ukrainians, non-Ukrainian spouses and third-country nationals). While the initial response was undertaken through a declared state of emergency, in March 2023, the Government of Moldova introduced a Temporary Protection mechanism until March 2026. This affords displaced people from Ukraine legal stay, the right to work, and access to essential government services.

In Moldova, the majority of displaced people from Ukraine (78 per cent) are women and children, which presents challenges for childcare, schooling and employment. Approximately, 83 per cent of displaced people live in private accommodation within the host community, which presents challenges for tenure security and quality housing.

Despite the positive and enabling approach offered by the Temporary Protection mechanism, many displaced households struggle to meet their basic needs. Recent reports have highlighted that displaced people support themselves through humanitarian assistance, personal savings, and/or pensions – which is further eroded by increasing inflation. Moreover, Moldova faces a growing energy crisis, with gas and electricity disruptions leaving both displaced and vulnerable host community members struggling to meet their needs.

Our activities in detail

NRC in Moldova continues to reinforce its coordination and collaboration across our core competencies. The programme teams have developed joint systems and processes to provide a holistic package to programme participants, with the goal of increasing programme impact and participant resilience by meeting a greater range of an individual or household's needs.

NRC implements its programmes through both direct and partner-led modalities, ensuring that activities under both approaches are complementary and interconnected. Over the last two years, we have strengthened our partnership approaches to better address the needs of displacement-affected populations, enhance accountability, and support a more sustainable and equitable local response.

This year, the Education and Livelihoods core competencies are fully partner-led, whilst the ICLA and Shelter and Settlements core competencies continue to operate through a hybrid modality.

Education

NRC aims to ensure safe pathways back to learning for refugee children and youth by supporting their integration into formal education and building their skills to deal with the effects of the crisis. We work to strengthen teachers' skills and provide support to meet the needs of children who have faced displacement and trauma.

Our targeted youth programming supports young leaders in designing, piloting and scaling up youth-led initiatives to respond to the needs of displaced people from Ukraine.

Information, counselling and legal assistance (ICLA)

We provide legal information, counselling and assistance through specialised lawyers and implementing partners to help people access rights and services. Our support covers legal identity, legal stay, employment laws and procedures, housing, land and property, business registration, and strengthening tenure security, among other needs in Moldova.

We also provide technical support to other actors in Moldova and work closely with our counterparts in Ukraine to support displaced people based on their current situation and needs.

Livelihoods and food security

Our Livelihoods team supports displaced people from Ukraine and vulnerable host communities, including third-country nationals and Roma communities, with employment and entrepreneurial activities directly or through local partners. The activities include business start-up and scale-up support, job counselling, job placement, and provision of capacity building to the National Employment Agency.

We collaborate with local authorities in designing and implementing activities with the aim of building a sustainable local system to increase the resilience and self-reliance of the targeted communities.

Shelter and settlements

In Shelter, we support displacement-affected people from Ukraine and vulnerable Moldovans with assistance through light to medium shelter (housing) repair through different modalities (cash and contractor). We also provide winter assistance, enabling households to meet essential winter needs and cover utility costs. In response to the energy crisis, assistance has been expanded in Transnistria region to support those affected.
